During the recent unprecedented nature of storms Ophelia & Eleanor many families were discommoded overnight resulting in many children being woken up in their sleep to find themselves homeless. Using retrofitted shipping containers set on a concrete platform or stilts (which will also prevent flooding) as an alternative accommodation unit will provide the occupier with a robust structure that will be very strong, durable and well able to withstand the onslaught of future severe storms similar to that of storms Ophelia & Eleanor. This new policy in turn will then prevent any future discommoding of families living in mobile homes.’
